Ethnic cuisines steal limelight at food festival

CHRONICLE NEWS SERVICE

Tura: Food Festival 2016, organised by ICFAI University, Tura was inaugurated on Saturday by Zenith M Sangma, Minister of Sports & Youth who attended the function as the Chief Guest. Ashahel D Shira, Parliamentary Secretary was the Guest of Honour while Pravin Bakshi as special invitee and a host of other dignitaries, students and food lovers attended the inaugural session.

Speaking on the occasion, Zenith Sangma said that the Government was taking all initiative to promote ethnic cuisines to attract tourists while endeavouring to make Meghalaya an organic State. To promote tourism the Government has introduced a scheme for entrepreneurs to establish hospitality industry with 20 per cent subsidy. Zenith also added that Garo Hills has its own unique cuisines which can be show raised to promote tourism as will generate employment for the local people.

In all five categories of cuisines were on display at the festival - indigenous foods, Indian cuisines, confectionery, salad dressing and vegetable carving. 32 participants, including the ICFAI students, took part in the food fest. The indigenous food section witnessed the highest participation marked by delicious Garo cuisines like Do'ro Kab'pa, Wak B'renga, So'bok Wak B'renga, Wak chambil fry, Wak baring Me'cheng etc. In the Indian cuisine category fish curry (South Indian), Chicken Dhansya, Mughlai Mutton Curry & Pulao, pork meat ball etc drew the visitors' attention. Confectionery section of the fest attracted the visitors with Red Velvet Cake, Black Currant, Chocolate cake and Custard cream cake. Vegetable carving and salad dressing section also drew lots of attention. Gourd Tikank, Lonely owl, Jaws Shark turned out to be prominent dishes in Vegetable carving section while the salad dressing category was marked by yoghurt dressing, cocktail dressing, Chinese salad and the like.

Local cuisines key to attract visitors: Zenith

GUARDIAN NEWS BUREAU TURA, SEPT. 24: It was toast to food and music at the ICFAI Food Festival held on ICFAI University Meghalaya premises today. There were 42 participants in the competition comprising five categories - Indian, indigenous, vegetable carving, salad and confectionaries.

The competition organised by the department of Travel and Tourism of the university was judged by some of the well known food experts of Tura.

Talking on the potential of exotic Garo delicacies, sports and youth affairs minister Zenith Sangma said, "We have to popularise the local cuisines to attract visitors to Garo Hills. People travel for several reasons and one of the factor is always the food."

He said Mission Organic, a flagship programme of the state government, would benefit interested entrepreneurs, who would set up ventures, which revolves around the food industry. "The government is committed to providing a complete protection and security in the food chain through mission 'organic', he added.

Zenith said Meghalaya hosted the international Terra Madre festival last year in Mawphlang to demonstrate the diversity of the indigenous local cuisines and have successfully marketed the state.

"We have to promote our food stories and the nutritional value of fresh food," he said.

ICFAI University vice-chancellor Alicia Gatpoh said, "The festival is an attempt to supplement the tourism industry."

She said through the festival the university enlightened the students on the scope of food industry.

Addressing the occasion, West Garo Hills deputy commissioner Pravin Bakshi said, "The strength of Garo Hills lies in its food, which needs to be promoted and branded."

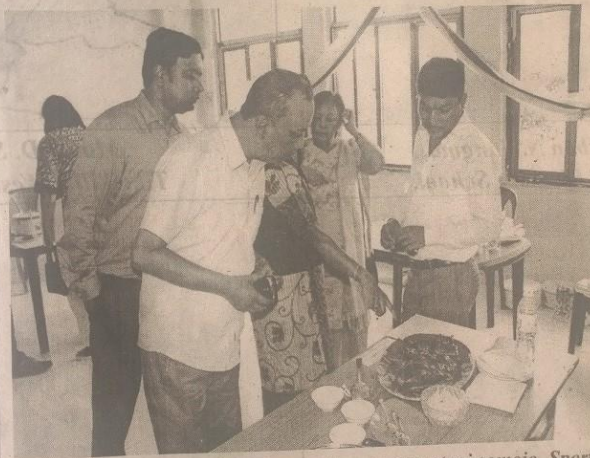

The festival was also attended by parliamentary secretary Ashahel D Shira among others.
